Design and Construction Safeguard the Owner's Investment

American business has bought more than 100,000 Speed Wagons, to serve in every class of commercial haulage, because the Speed Wagon is fundamentally sound in vital elements:

The Speed Wagon is, we believe, the most economical 2500-pound commercial car in the world, according to initial investment, price per pound pay-load, per horsepower or any other basis of computing relative values.

No other vehicle combines so much power and ruggedness per pound chassis weight, is so capable of easy owner-attention, nor is so widely backed by service facilities. The Speed Wagon makes hurried travel safe on highway routes or on city streets. The stability of Reo as an insti-

Our problem is to determine what rees are suitable for planting in hat localities and, after planting. what care they require. Among the most important considerations are climate, soil and topography. First—trees must be indigenous to the temperature and soil in which they are expected to grow or we must be reasonably sure from experimentation, that they will thrive in foreign soil and temperaure. Secondly-the conformation of the land has an important influence on the prosperity of the growth for instance one could hardly expect trees that come to their prime at the ook's edge to do more than barely hold their own, if that, when planted on hillsides from which moisture quickly drains.

Selecting Varieties

Our roadside trees are individually selected at a nursery and we only purchase stock that is raised in the nursery where the selection is made. In replanting a tree the roots and lateral branches are carefully trimned to give young trees more than fighting chance to pull through heir first few years under the hard conditions imposed by pavements on ne side and sidewalks on the other,

both impervious to water.
Our pruning force comprises 15 experienced tree climbers under a competent foreman and we endeavor to prune the trees on one third the mileage of our Brookline highway. The dead wood and lateral branches which interfere with the proper development of the trees are removed. and all cavities treated. We use regulres the examination of bout 75 miles of streets on which we planted 12,000 roadside trees.

Aid to Conservation

Thus, to us the tree has become vastly more than a primrose on the river's brim. It is beautiful, it is useful, and is of vital importance in conservation of natural resources. We are apt to forget that our water supply and climate are dependent apon maintaining great stretches of tree growth to the north and west.

If we stop a moment to consider we stop a moment to consider all the moisture that one leaf can contain and then realize that a moderate size tree has seven thou-sand leaves that would cover an irea of five acres if placed side by side, we get a faint glimpse of the power of each tree, multiplied by the power of every other tree, to

The Copley Players gave commendable interpretation of the play last night. Mr. Clive handled the trying performance of Hilary with consistent shading into the extreme moods of a very temperamental man. His last appeal to his wife for her love was a touching one, it gave the play the substance that established its character, replacing exposition with art. Miss Standing rose in every instance to the determination of the modern girl who succeeds in running all the domestic matters including packing off her mother on a hasty honeymoon. Miss Newcombe, her mother, vacillated tragically between her duty to her former husband and her present suitor. Miss Dudgeon as the aunt, who belonged to the nineteenth century, provided some humor in byplay that fairly "brought down the house." The remainder of the cast

The archæological part is the most important side of the work and a very comprehensive one, as most of the relics found in the British Isles are now privately owned and must be ex-amined from private collections or on estates spread throughout the country. At first they found, in the United States, a timid public, but American manufacturers knew their patrons and soon began to bring out the type of design best calculated to find purchasers

Easily Cut by the Amateur The sketch shows a pattern that has proved one of the most popular, and it shows also the simplicity with which such a frock can be made. The pattern is known as a border design, and is printed on silk that is 56 inches wide, so that one border may form the hem of the skirt, and the other border may form the neck line and the decoration down the sleeves, on the outside of

This wide silk appeals to the amateur dressmaker, for it needs merely to be hung from the shoulders and caught at the hips with a bit of shirring or a few gathers. It is especially easy to make up in shortsleeved frocks, for in that case one needs to buy only a length of silk a few inches longer than one's largest measurement. Six inches more than the measurement around the

Thatched roofs add quaint beauty to old English farmhouses and village dwellings—in fact, this architectural tradition manages to hold its own through the ages, despite unusual constructional progress. Slate quarries may produce roofing at comparatively small cost, but the cottage, thatched in primitive fashion with that which is nearest at hand, shows no signs of disappearing from the landscape. The photograph shown above carries us into a rural district to witness the interesting operation of rethatching.

Mr. Barrymore's Hamlet was arresting from the first instant that the curtain, rising upon the palace scene, revealed, moodily brooding in his chair, a prince with a lofty, thoughtful brow, a striking, beautiful, and somewhat ascetic face; and -as we saw directly he rose-a figure graceful in pose, and lithe and easy in movement. Voice and delivery, too, were pleasing, princely, authoritative. Without organ notes, or much compelling sweetness of toneneither sweetness nor warmth were prominent qualities of this interpretation, as they were of Forbes-Robertson's-Mr. Barrymore held his audience by personal grace and charm, by faultless elocution, and by a distinctive clarity of utterance, unequaled by any other Hamlet within my recollection. Deficient in sense of poetry, and of beauty, with little visionary sweep of imagination, without ecstacy, and without much power of cumulative effect, he seemed to obtain his results, not, as most actors do, by instinctive feeling, so much as by sheer intellectuality, by a sequence of logical processes, through which the prince argued himself at last into brief, though fiery, outbursts of emotion, leading up to action. As if reflecting the essentially rationalistic age we live in, Mr. Barrymore's rendering in certain passages had a curious twist toward modernity, whereas in others, especially the play-scene-quite one of the bestthe actor deliberately adopted a more primitive, archaic style, Elizabethan

COLUMBIA NINE GETS OUTDOORS

NEW YORK, March 10—The baseball team of Columbia University made its first outdoor appearance of the season, yesterday afternoon, when the 40 candidates for the nine held a practice on South Field. Andrew Coakley, the veteran coach, was in charge, and John Van Brocklin '25, captain for the second year, headed the candidates, and showed that his pitching arm was still to be depended on, sending over both straight and curve balls with good control.

In England the principal, if not the sole duty, is to sign checks and accounts as passed by the finance committee, at the head of which, as chairman, is the head of an important London banking house.

Robert Andrew Brown of Bathgate succeeds Henry Robinson as provincial grand master of Linlithgowshire, and John Nicols Spargo, of Ogden, I'tah, has been appointed representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland at the Grand Lodge of Utah. Critics of Freemasonry sometimes write and speak of the accession of men prominent in all circles of life calling into Freemasonry as though this were a new or moder feature. The contrary is the case. Throughout the whole of recorded Masonic history the most prominent men have been those who stood highest in the councils of the countries to which they belonged. # THE ROYAL ROUTE TO SCOTLAND by LMS

TAKE YOUR TICKET to Scotland by the London Midland and Scottish Railway via Carlisle, and you can take either of the two most interesting ways to Scotland. Better still, you can go one way and return the other.

The West Coast Route (the Royal Route) from Euston goes by the Lake District—the Ruskin and Wordsworth Country—and you can stop over there. The Midland Route goes by the Peak District of Derbyshire (Peveril of the Peak) and the Burns Country, and you can stop over to explore these romantic regions. Between them, these two routes embrace a region within which lies half the beauty of Britain. At Gleneagles, in the heart of Scotland, the L M S have built a mighty palace of an hotel—the "Biltmore" of Scotland, the "Plaza" of the Highlands. Gleneagles stands at the gate of the most romantic and beautiful region in the world, where tennis can be varied by exploring Safety Razor and the Commercial Solvents issues fell back 1 to 3½ points.

Several issues which moved counter to the general trend included Allis-Chalmers, General Asphalt and Maxwell Motors B, up 1 to 2½ points.

Foreign exchanges opened steady.

Reactionary price tendencies prevalled throughout the morning, quoted values melting away in relatively dull trading. Brokers attributed the selling to the higher money rate and the lack of effective buying support, due to the fact that most pools and small traders, were carrying all the stocks shey could handle.

Ralls falled to respond to record carloadings in the first nine weeks of the year, the St. Paul situation acting as a restraining influence. St. Paul common duplicated its record low of 11½, and the stock loaned flat, indicating a large short interest. Miami Copper rouched the lowest price in nearly 20 years at 10½.

United States Cast Iron Pipe broke 7 points, Commercial Solvents A and B 4½ and 3½ respectively, and American Car & Foundry, Ludlum Steel, Associated Dry Goods and Wilson & Co. preferred about 3 points each.

Lall money opened at 4½ per cent. The failure of U. S. Steel to maintain its rally on the publication of the favorable tonnage figures, caused a wide distribution of selling orders for both accounts.

A number of influential shares ruled three points or more lower, with Commercial Solvents A breaking nine points. American Bank Note sold at 134, compared with the previous price of 206 a month ago.

Bonds Show Weakness

Bond prices drifted to lower levels in today's trading on selling induced by continued uncertainty over the money situation and the unsettled tone of the stock market. Speculative doubt over the financial fate of the Chicago, St. Paul & Milwaukee Railway, now the subject of banking conferences here, was reflected in further weakness of the road's maturing 4s, which reacted almost 2 points to a new low for the year. 8800 Sinclair ... 21% 2600 Skelly Oil .. 27% 600 *Sloss Shef .. 894 100 *So PR Sug .684 62 So Pacific .. 104% 38 So Railway .88% 200 Spicer Co ... 18

ATLANTA, March 10—R. H. Macy & Co. have purchased 60 per cent of the stock of the Davison-Paxon-Stokes Company, department store, which is said to have sales of $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 annually.

Montgomery Ward and Sears, Roebuck Plans for Expansion

February figures of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Montgomery Ward & Co., the two large mail order houses, serve to bring into sharper relief the change in sales results which these concerns have experienced in recent months. Scars, Roebuck reported a 17.64 per cent gain over February, 1924, sales, while Montgomery Ward showed 1.06 per cent increase per cent increase.

During the first three quarters of last year Montgomery Ward, because of more active sales campaigning, greatly outstripped its rival in gaining new business. The former's increase for the first nine months was 20 per cent, compared with an actual loss of 1.3 per cent for Sears, Roebuck. But in the last months of 1924 the latter began to force ahead rapidly, until in began to forge ahead rapidly, until in the first two months of this year its gains were respectively 14.40 per cent and 17.64 per cent. Montgomery Ward's increases for the two months have been 13.01 per cent and 1.06 per

nt. Despite its failure to advance sales greatly last month, however, Montgomery Ward's total of $12,723,423 was the greatest for any February in the company's history, and February was the thirty-seventh consecutive month in which an increase has been accomplished. Its gain of 1.06 per cent compared with 38.91 per cent in February, 1924—the largest for any month of that year.

Sears, Roebuck's total for last month of $21,032,590 was the largest February in the company's history with the exception of February, 1920—a period during which sales were running at a rate never since equaled—when the total was $28,202,067. For the first two months of this year combined, Sears, Roebuck's gain was 15.95 per cent and Montgomery Ward's 6.6

Both companies are pushing vigorous physical expansion programs. Sears, Roebuck is building a $5,000,-

HIGHER PRICES IN GRAY GOODS CLOTH MARKETS

Many Small Orders, and Am Total Volume Is Considerable

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 10 (Special)—Prices in the gray goods markets have at last begun to reflect the improvement in business, and the last week has seen a general marking quotations on most standard factor in stimulating buyers generally into definite action with regard to their future requirements.

Strength in the raw cotton markets, of course, had a considerable part in making buyers willing to accept the new levels, and the power of the upward swing has been no small factor in stimulating buyers generally into definite action with regard to their future requirements.

The trading has not been in unusually large volume so far as individual sales are concerned, but there have been so many small and medium sized orders laid down that the sum total runs into very respectable volume, and a great many of the mills are now getting into a sufficiently strong position, with regard to forward business, to make them indifferent to further orders except at attractive price levels.

This applies particularly to many of the southern mills making standard print cloth constructions, and also, to a somewhat lesser degree, to similar mills in the east.

The demahd for odd counts and narrow cloths has been somewhat slow, however, compared with the call for the staple types, such as 38½ inch 64x60s, 60x48s, and 68x72s.

These have been selling recently for 3½, c, 8½, c, and 11½ c respectively, and have been rather strong at those figures, with eastern makes bringing at least a quarter of a cent more when available.

Finishers Are Busy

Sateens, twills, pajama checks and other types of convertibles made from print-cloth yarns have also been selling recently for 3½, c, 8½, c, and 11½ c respectively, and have been rather strong at those figures, with eastern makes bringing at least a quarter of a cent more when available.

Finishers Are Busy

Sateens, twills, pajama checks and other types of convertibles made from print-cloth yarns have also been selling recently for 9½, c, 8½, c, and 11½ c respectively, and have been rather strong at those figures, with eastern makes bringing at least a quarter of a cent more when available.

Finishers are flusy though some, with a keen eye to the future of the raw material markets, have been quite willing to place long forward contracts when they could do so at prices substantially under the current market levels for quick goods.

Finishers are reporting a sharp increase in their business, and some of the large printers are having difficulty filling the demand liveries to begin, unless they are will-ing to pay a sharp premium, and they are beginning to see now what effect the hand-to-mouth buying policy has on the producing end of the business. Fine goods lines are active, but not quite so headlong as in some previous weeks, and the gray goods mills are demanding that their quotations be fully met before they will add to present commitments. Printed goods on this type of fabric, such as broadcloths, voiles, safeens, and pongees voiles, sateens, and pongees are finding favor with the ultimate consumer, and the mills are finding it possible now to sell the gray goods at a slight profit margin, some of them taking business running well through the summer. The volume of business, however, is somewhat smaller this week in the division than for some weeks past, possibly because of the upward trend of prices.

Yarns have seen some increase in demand, and the bullish outlook on raw cotton is causing certain large volume consumers to grow anxious about their future yarn supplies, and these people are trying to contract considerable forward period at over a considerable forward period at present prices.

New England Field

The amount of buying the last week or two, however, has not been sufficient to take up all the slack in the New England yarn producing field, though the prospect of air enormous increase soon-in the demand for cord tipe fabric, gives promise of freat Northern 5s '73.

mous increase soon-in the demand for cord time fabric, gives promise of better times ahead for New England spinners.

According to the latest official figures now available, the New England cotton mills are still at least 20 per cent below full normal rate of production, singleshift, while the southern spindles are running overtime in a sufficient number of cases to bring the average up virtually to 120 per cent of normal full single-shift production.

The improvement since these figures were compiled may alter them on the up-side so that there is little doubt that the entire industry is operating today at very nearly lts full normal capacity, with some overtime in the south and a balancing amount of curtailment in New England. In spite of overtime work, however, the southern mills are beginning to discover that they have made little or no money the last year, and only too frequently have run behind, and the spinners around castonia are talking now of adopting an organized policy of curtailment beginning early next month in order to correct the situation.

Full River continues at a very much reduced rate of production, owing to heavy curtailment among some of the coarse goods plants. The sales of the last week in the plain print cloth styles are estimated in the neighborhood of 60,000 pleces, which is only a small fraction of the current cloth styles are estimated in the neighborhood of 60,000 pleces, which is only a small fraction of the current output, though so many of the print cloth mills are edging over now into the realm of fancies or semi-fancies that it is hard to tell just what the normal print cloth production is.

International Paper

By far the most significant indusrial statement of the year, in so far as Canada is concerned, is that attributed to President Graustein of the discussing the new projects of that company, to the effect that the newsprint industry is going to Canada. This has been known for some time, but the acknowledgment of this fact from so high an authority is significant. This branch of Canadian in-dustry will witness more progress during the current year than it pos-sibly has eyer had during any preceding 12 months.

It is understood that when the Canadian development of the Interna-tional Paper Company shall have been completed, its production of newsprint in this country will be 1000 tons daily Of course, the ratification of the contract with the newly organized Canadian International Paper Company has yet to be formally put through, but no hitch is expected in this connection.

This done, the taking over of the Riordan and Gatineau properties and their development will be undertaken. Among the new projects to be undertaken is the building of a paper mill on the Gatineau River near Ottawa, with a capacity of about 500 tons of newsprint a day.

Canada as Newsprint Source

The diminishing wood supplies in the eastern states, rendering it neces-sary to bring such material from Canada, which means costly freight charges, is turning the scale in the newsprint industry heavily in favor of this country. Wood for the new Gatineau mill can be delivered by water, obviously a decided advantage. As 70,000 horsepower may also be developed near by, it is plain that this combination of favorable factors will give the company a decided advantage in the newsprint field. So its future is assured for years to come. Herein is seen the explanation of why the news print industry is coming to Canada.

Trade relations between Canada and the United States are sure to receive a very great deal of attention in the near future. There is a large element in this country which is continually pressing for reciprocity, and though the attitude of the United States does not appear to be very favorable on this subject, still the discussion of it is bound to have effect on both sides of

Statement Shows Austria Is Again in Midst of Economic Crisis

VIENNA, Feb. 25 (Special Correspondence) - The twenty-fifth monthly report of the Commissioner-Gention. Some are pretty lean, because eral of the League of Nations for of the reduction of their feed to the Austria, Dr. Alfred Zimmerman, has The Commissioner-General states:

After experiencing in 1923 a year of great and possibly excessive business activity, but also a year in which the budgetary situation con-siderably improved, and after pass-ing through a stock exchange crisis at the beginning of last year, Austria is once again in the midst of an economic crisis. Nevertheless, unlike the crisis of 1922, the present situation is not without its reassuring aspects. The stability of the crown, which is the basis of the economic life and of the public finances of the country, is now sufficiently assured to allow a return to the gold standard, which has already been made. Commercial relations with several neighboring states which have suceeded in stabilizing their currencies have been regulated by means of tariff treaties. Within the country, the Government has managed, by a series of legislative measures create a market for capital and thus to facilitate the obtaining of credits.

After the introduction of the gold standard, a bill is to be submitted to Parliament for the introduction of gold balance-sheets, which will probably be voted at the same time as the reduction of the tax on companies' profits.

An Attraction to Capital

These measures will enable firms to give a true picture of their situa-tion and to increase their dividends, which will doubtless serve to attract foreign capital. From the budgetary point of view, it is to be noted that, in spite of the crisis, receipts have not so far declined to a disquieting extent. The deficit, which is still considerable, is due partly to capital expenditure on public works and partly to an increase in current expenditure consequent upon measures voted last year.

One characteristic symptom is the state of unemployment, which in turn reacts upon the public finances. The doles paid to the unemployed ceipt of relief reached 154,000 at the end of December, 1924, and 175,000 in the middle of January, 1925, showing a constant increase since last July, when the figure was only

The operators of several amateur stations installed an eight-tube superheterodyne receiver and a loop aerial in an automobile and set out to locate the leaks. They visited first those sections of the city where the interference was known to be serious. Most of the electric light interference was found near poles supporting transformers.

About half a dozen bad leaks were discovered and reported to both companies with the result that the interference no longer exists.

TRIESTE MAKES BID FOR TRADE

Hamburg Endeavors to Compete With Southern City as Commercial Port

BERLIN, Feb. 24 (Special Correspondence)-In its anxiety to parry the strenuous efforts now being made by Trieste to regain its pre-war area of Central European trade, Hamburg has lately dispatched a commission of representatives of German shipping interests to Prague to study conditions on the spot and to discuss what methods could be adopted for the improvement and better organization of the Czechoslovak transit traffic via Hamburg. Among other things the German shipping companies intend to set up in Prague a special transit trade bureau for dealing with such ques-

It will be remembered that Ger many at the close of 1924 came to an arrangement with the Czechoslovak Government, fixing special railway freight rates for the transit traffic between Hamburg and the Czechoslovak industrial centers. The cheapness of these freights marked Germany's determination not to let Trieste have things all its own way = in Central Europe. The new step now taken shows that Hamburg means to follow up this policy with fresh measures.

Saxon Citles Protest

In this connection it is interesting to note that the low railway freights now introduced between Czechoslovakia and Hamburg have not only led the Saxon cities Chemnitz, Leipsic and Dresden, to protest against having to pay a higher railway tariff to Hamburg than the much more distant Prague has to pay, but have also incited the river and canal shipping to demur at the manner in which the railways have cut down Czecho slovak freight rates to a level that makes it impossible for inland ship-ning to compete. The Hamburg shipping press is greatly perturbed by the steady energy with which Trieste, despite the low freights to Hamburg, is pushing its way not only into Poland and Czechoslovakia but even into South Germany. It is everywhere acknowledged that the regularity and re-liability of the Trieste train service. the accommodating nature of the of the warehousing on the Adriatic have helped in no small degree to land, president of the All-America Radio Corporation.

Trieste Aggressive

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt also draws attention to the efforts now being made to convert Trieste into an import harbor for French colonial products, so that these goods may henceforth enter Central Europe via the Adriatic. Another important in-novation which will considerably affect Hamburg is the movement for the import via Trieste of frozen meat from the Argentine. Trieste means to supply Central Europe, including Austria and South Germany, with this increasingly important commodity, and the Trieste Chamber of Commerce, with this end in view, is erect-

Total Attendance for Two Seasons Is Expected to Reach 50,000,000

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Feb. 27-Sir Travers Clarke, the Chief Administrator of win back for Trieste its old com- the British Empire Exhibition, in an 56 Valley Road

From the day that the Exhibition opens we are going to make it go with a swing. All indications go to show that Wembley has lost little of its attractive power. There has never been an exhibition in this country that has run to a second edition, but it is going to be just as attractive as last year, and I shall be disappointed if the total attendance of the two seasons does not reach something like 50,000,000. I am hoping that railway and other transport companies will man-age to reduce their fares even lower than last year, and that shipping companies will see their way to reduce passenger fares in the same way that they reduced their freight charges. The Cunard Line is or-ganizing special tourist excursions to America, so why should not this procedure be reversed for the bene-fit of the dominions and colonies. Wembley this year will be much more of a social center than last, and the club which is taking the place of the old Lucullus Restau rant will probably be the scene many social gatherings during the On the more serious side the Exhibition will lack nothing from the popular point of view by comparison with last year. Though some firms have fallen out, others have taken their places, and many important in dustries are taking part again on a more elaborate scale. Already, three months before the opening date, space in the Palace of Industry is almost entirely mortgaged and it does not look as if any would be unoccupied in the Palace of Engi-neering. And now that the catering question has been settled we are in position to go ahead with every

He said musical authorities in Ontario had indorsed the scheme, and had waited on the Ontario Government asking that it be adopted, but their reception was not the most encouraging. There has been a large body of opinion, both in Great Britain and in India, during the last year or two, which has

believed that the Indian Constitution of 1920, the well - known Montagu-Chelmsford reforms, has proved a dismal failure. The events of the last few months seem to disprove this view and to support the stalwarts who have maintained that the reforms were going to succeed after all. In Bengal the Legislative Council has reversed, by 76 votes to 51, its last year's decision to reject the vote for ministers' salaries and so bring the diarchic experiment to a temporary end. And in the All-India Assembly at Delhi the Swarajists are more and more abandoning the policy of pure obstruction, and the Independents are at times willing to co-operate with the Government.

The Indian Constitution was an exceedingly bold experiment, perhaps the boldest in history. It laid the foundations for self-government in a country containing 315,000,000 people, divided into as many races and speaking as many languages as Europe. It provided that the responsibility for certain functions of government should be assumed by the representatives of the people at once, and that this responsibility should be extended as rapidly as the legislatures showed their capacity to discharge it properly. The Constitution, too, was launched at a peculiarly unfavorable moment, the beginning of the postwar era.

The consequence was the non-cooperation movement initiated by Mahatma Gandhi, which set out to make the working of the Constitution impossible by a special form of passive resistance, in the hope of forcing immediate swaraj or self-government for India. That movement failed, as everybody knows, and it was followed by the Swarajist movement, under which memberships were accepted in the councils with the deliberate purpose of forcing the pace of selfgovernment by a wrecking and obstructionist policy from within. As recent events have shown, that program is also beginning to be thrown overboard, as its results are appearing, and while the majority of the elected representatives in India are united in the demand for a more rapid progress toward swarai, they seem daily coming to recognize more clearly that they must gain their ends by constitutional and not by other means.

Thus, throughout the whole period that the Constitution has been in operation, a steady process of education has been going on. Despite the severity of the storms which have struck it, the Constitution itself has stood intact, and experience has steadily enlarged and widened the outlook both of the British officials and of the elected Indians as to what the problems of self-government in India really are. And that is the point that really matters. So long as there was a head-on collision between an Indian demand for immediate swarai and a British refusal to transfer responsibility or power, no progress could be made. But the Constitution by sharing responsibility and power between British and Indians has begun to make apparent to both the real difficulties which have to be solved before self-government can become complete.

How formidable these difficulties are a mere numeration of them will show. First, there is the sheer problem of size. The United States is much the largest democracy that has ever been a success, and its population is only one-third that of India. Again, it has a single language, no nationalities within itself, and 150 years of tradition and experience behind it. India has over twenty main languages, many nationalities, and no experience in self-government. Then there is the problem of defense. Century after century India has been invaded, and its governments upset, from the northwest, an area inhabited by some of the most warlike of mankind. Can India yet create and maintain the army which will close that open gate? Then there are the 700 native states each under an hereditary autocrat. How are they to be incorporated in a self-governing India?

Finally, there is the question of religion. There are in India about 70,000,000 Muhammadans and 220,000,000 Hindus. They are deeply divided. Before the advent of the British the Muhammadans ruled India. Because on the whole they are the more virile people, many of them aspire to rule once more, should the British retire. They vehemently protest against the position of inferiority to the Hindus which they would occupy under any system of equal franchise. Then, again, there is division within the Hindu ranks between the privileged Brahman and the other castes. These are the real difficulties in the way of self-government, and they will be removed only by long and patient work. Not the least of the advantages to India of the Constitution is that it enables her to work out her problems under constitutional forms and not amid the governmental chaos which has overtaken China in her similar task.

Newspapers which still cling to the claim that they are acting in the interest of public welfare by publishing crime stories are finding continually less ground on which to rest their defense, a defense which is supported more by journalistic tradition than by attested facts. Because most newspapers have for so many years excused their pandering to the baser instincts of human thought in their reckless competition against each other, they have, when challenged on such a policy, assumed to take their original presumptions as established truths. Today public opinion is awakening to two facts: First, that the suggestion of crime is a stimulus to crime; and, secondly, that the newspapers are deluding themselves in setting up the claim of public service in spreading, and elaborating and coloring as they do, the details of crime and other objectionable matter to their readers. A pertinent commentary on this situation which merits thoughtful consideration is contained in Clarence Darrow's article on "Crime and Punishment" in the current issue of the Century Magazine. It reads:

More Evidence Against Crime News

The general opinion has been usually accepted that as the harsher punishments were relaxed, crime decreased. Most, if not all, the states in the Union forbid showing scenes of executions on "movie" screens. The reason arged is that it suggests crime and leads to its commission. Still, the newspapers publish all the details, sending these suggestions broadcast to the community. is a reason for forbidding the showing of such pictures of crime on moving-picture screens, there is an even greater reason for forbidding the stories of crime to be printed by the newspapers.

In its code of journalistic ethics the National Association of Newspaper Editors, representing the executives of fully 80 per cent of the daily newspapers in the cities of the United States of more than 100,000, has the following to say concerning the responsibility of the press: "The right of the newspaper to attract and to hold readers is restricted by nothing but considerations of public welfare. Freedom from all obligations except that of fidelity to the public interest is vital."

The opportunity is at hand to put these ideals more fully into daily practice.

Departing somewhat from the traditional practice in the consideration of questions affect-

Paving the Way to the World Court

ing the international policies of the United States, the national House of Representatives, on the day preceding its final adjournment, by a record vote adopted resolutions favoring adherence by the Government to the protocol establishing a Court of International Justice. It is significant that of those voting, 301 favored the resolution's, while but twenty-eight voted in the negative. Of the dissenting members seventeen are listed as Republicans, ten as Democrats, and one as Farmer-Labor.

Presumably it is a safe assumption that the sentiment expressed by this vote is fairly representative of the prevailing popular sentiment in the United States toward the World Court issue. There is reason to believe that had it been possible to bring similar resolutions to a vote in the Senate, the percentage in favor of such adherence would have been as great as in the House. The result of this test ballot-for the action taken must be regarded as advisory merely may be appraised as a hopeful indication that Congress, at its next session, will proceed to the definite acceptance of a course approved by both President Harding and President Coolidge, outlined and urged by the Wilson Administration, recommended by political conventions, and overwhelmingly indorsed by the American people.

A quite liberal interpretation of parliamentary law, or usage, was necessary, apparently, to justify the House of Representatives in taking any action on such resolutions in advance of a decision by the Senate on the main issue involved. It was argued, however, that whereas participation by the United States in the activities of the World Court would involve a public appropriation of funds, the House was within its rights in passing the resolutions. The only unfortunate aspect is that the action was taken so near the end of the session. A similar expression by the House a month ago, or a year ago, might have induced the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to report out for approval, or disapproval, resolutions of a similar tenor. Only by an eleventh-hour reversal of that committee's policy of delay in the handling of this particular matter could a vote have been taken in the Senate before the hour of final adjournment. There remains the somewhat remote possibility that that body, at its brief extra session, may decide to pass the resolutions sent to it from the House. But such an outcome, it is now apparent, is hardly to be expected.

Representative Burton of Ohio, a consistent advocate of American adherence to the World Court plan under the reservations outlined by President Harding and President Coolidge, called attention to the fact that the plan had been indorsed by the American Bar Association, the Federal Council of Churches, individual churches and clergymen almost without number, men's and women's clubs in every state in the Union; and by American Legion posts throughout the country. "It is very natural," he said, "that this should be true, because if there is any one traditional policy of our own United States it is to seek an amicable settlement of controversies between nations." No representative body of American lawmakers, realizing the truth of that statement, could vote otherwise than did the House majority upon the resolutions presented. It is a foregone conclusion that the Senate, with the issue as concisely presented, would similarly record its approval.

One of the most interesting reforesting results which has been successfully achieved of late

Planting

Big-Tree

Seeds in

is reported from California, the State of the giant sequola trees. These forest monsters, which date back thousands of years and which, it is believed, grew in battalions clear across the North American continent, over Greenland and into Siberia and north Russia in the years of the dim distant past, have for long been considered beyond the power of the forestry experts to transplant. But now comes information to the effect that some seedling plantations, which were set out in 1912, are giving promise of developing healthy trees.

It will certainly constitute a triumph of the art of forestry if these mammoth trees, now on their last line of defense, which are looked upon as the greatest of all trees in point of size, antiquity and beauty, can be rescued from final disintegration and extinction. Of course, their rehabilitation will be a slow process, but at the same time it must be recognized that the assistance which present-day advanced forestry technique will give to speed the growth of these marvels of the woods will enable them to grow up amidst conditions far easier for development than was the case in the primeval past. It is said that miners in the Tahoe National Forest working a gold mine 2500 or 3000 feet below the lava cap of one of the Sierra peaks, in a former stream bed, came across an old flood deposit in which were the tangled logs of a group of the sequoias that once grew on the mountain slopes. Though buried for unknown thousands of years, the logs were in an excellent state of preservation, the annual rings standing out as plainly as if the trees had been felled only a few days before. Such timber, it is needless to say, would be invaluable to the forest lands of America, and when the fact of its resistant nature is remembered in connection with the proof established by the experiments mentioned that in a twelve-year period the big trees have outstripped the other native conifers, the possibilities assume importance almost beyond computation.

It simply gets into the air at this season of the year in the New England hill country and

all along the picturesque section from Lake Champlain to the Great Lakes basin, and thence on to the Rockies. The thing is that almost indefinable sense of spring. To trace it, one must begin farther south than the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Ozarks, or even the Everglades. From somewhere below the Gulf of Mexico it must have come, because it brings with it pleasant odors which are a reminder of summer days and bright twilights of a season that now seems long past. But in the northern country there is unmistakably mixed with it a pleasant tinge of wood smoke, a hazy, lingering softening of the glare of the late winter sun, that brings with it, too, a memory of Indian summer days.

To the studious vagabond who has delved long and uncomplainingly at his accustomed tasks through the winter months, the call of the open spaces is almost irresistible. Familiarity with the paths along the edges of the woods and across the pasture lots aids in picturing them in alluring stretches. Experience assures him that the prospect will not become less pleasant with realization. That is what makes mere difficult the putting aside of the temptation to fare forth, with no thought of the calendar and without heed to the somewhat ominous forecasts of the weather man. Spring is spring, no matter what the almanac may say

So a journey of exploration is begun. Sure enough, the portents have not been misleading. The smoke-haze becomes more clearly defined as the hills and woods are neared, and with good reason. On a sunny slope bordered by towering maples, a mile from his farmhouse and barns, a man who has also felt the urge of the season has set up his sugar camp. That is evidence enough to convince a willing believer that spring has come. The fire beneath the steaming boiling-pan sends out a welcome glow, for the north wind has not yet been tempered to any appreciable softness. Bare branches high up in the trees argue unceasingly with each other, perhaps complaining that there is so long delayed the return of their bright garb nipped off so unceremoniously by the October frosts.

Patient oxen, disregarding the inclement dampness of the brown sward, lie contentedly awaiting the time for the next journey which will take them and their crude sled and its barrel to the trees from which hang the bright sap buckets. The farm dog, alert to the faintest sound, mistakes a falling twig for the hurried scampering of a tree squirrel. The lowing of a cow in a far-off pasture is echoed softly from a near-by hillside. Still farther away a strident automobile horn indicates the intersection of the state road and interurban trolley line.

There are beauties enough to fill the eye of the confirmed pathfinder, but they are not all visible to the uninitiated. In a month, or a little longer, however, nothing will be concealed. There are in store myriad colors and shapes with which the landscape of the New England hill sections will be bedecked. These days simply give gratifying promise of what is soon to be. To one able to see with the eye of faith and understanding, the step is short to actual realization.

Editorial Notes

Even though a certain distinguished gentleman who visited America not long since publicly declared on his return to England that prohibition is all humbug, that does not make it such. This policy of abusing the plaintiff's attorney is not a new one, but it never gets very far in forwarding a situation. One cannot, however, but admire Mr. S. M. Holden, Parliamentary prohibition candidate for Whitechapel, London, for his reply, which was forthcoming at short notice. Prohibition in America, he said has been officially declared an established success, causing unbounded prosperity, high wages, enormous working-class savings, less poverty, less crime, increased morality and the emptying of jails. He added, moreover, with perfect truth, that the opinion of casual visitors to the United States, broadcast in other lands on their return thither, is of little importance against the mass opinion of America's voters, which indicates that prohibition has come to stay. How often we forget that what is inherently right has nothing to fear from insinuation, veiled attack or innuendo!

In urging the importance of Anglo-American friendship, the almost equally important Pan-American tie sometimes tends to be forgotten. Hence it is the more fitting that General Pershing should have emphasized this issue in his address at the unveiling of a monument erected by the Cuban Government in honor of the Americans who perished on the Maine. In his remarks he urged that it seems fitting that there should exist a very intimate relationship between the oldest republic of the American continent and the youngest. He continued:

But in the larger sense we belong to the great brotherhood of American republics, and in that status all of us have a destiny to fulfill. Our several republics are founded on the theory of government by the

The task that presents itself to every American republic is not only to develop the untold resources of the new continent, but at the same time to prepare each individual for a wise participation in the government of which he is a part,

A Forgotten City of the South Seas

By MARC T. GREENE

Manga Reva, Gambier Group East by south from Tahiti, 1000 miles, lies the fairest group of islands in the South Seas, "delectable isles" indeed, fairylike in their beauty, perfect in their climate, overflowing with plenty. They are called the Gambler Islands; and here on Manga Reva, where great mountains look down upon all that is left of the forgotten city of Rikitea, one's fancies of an Eden of the seas seem almost to find their fulfillment.

Yet here today, where yesterday there were thousands, where ten thousand might yet live and never know physical want, only a few hundred remain. Among the orange groves, in the shade of the coconut palms, hidden in the banana and mangrove orchards, cluster the ruins of the stone houses of Rikitea's prosperity, when it was one of the important ports of the South Seas, with its thousands of people, its large trade, even its frequent steamships from far lands. Tomorrow it bids fair to be one with the lost and forgotten cities of the Mayas and of the Incas.

The twin peaks of Manga Reva, like sentinels guarding an all but deserted sea, tower thousands of feet skyward; and threescore miles away their tips rise above the horizon like almost submerged Matterhorns. We saw them first at sunset, glowing through a purple haze. But in the morning we were at their feet, off the entrance to the broad lagoon harbor of Rikitea.

And the golden sunlight crept slowly down their rugged wall-like cliffs as the native canoes guided and convoyed us to our anchorage. They had seen a city come and a civilization develop, had these somber tains, and now they were seeing the passing of each. And high up on a shoulder of the cliffside nearest the town, reached by a steep and narrow trail, I noted a strange monument, so placed as to stand forth in startling silhouette against the sky, visible far at sea.

'The memorial to the last king of Manga Reva," the schooner captain told me. And it appeared that he had been a good king, this "Gregorio Malupoa," as the memorial declares his name: He reigned from 1851 to 1865 over more than 5000 people in Rikitea alone, and as many others in the villages about the island. As we came to our anchorage, the remains of the royal palace were visible through the palm and wild orange trees, with a noble archway intact, through which visitors from the sea entered as

The walls of the royal fishponds extended seaward from the beach; and beyond, guarding the lagoon entrance, stood the remains of a little fortress, with parapet and bastions and sentry boxes still intact, but slowly disappearing within the grasp of banyan and mangrove pandanus branch. Each and all had received hospitality of the Manga Revans' last king. Englishman or Spaniard, New Bedford whaler or explorer or missionary, all entered in state through that royal archway. and none departed without regret. + +

Rikitea must have been a city fine and fair fifty years ago; but the world knew little of it then, and it knows practically nothing of its passing today, for a little trading schooner twice a year from Papeete is the only link. At the end of a broad footpath, arbored by trees which hang heavy with oranges and mangoes and breadfrait, and even peaches, bordered by sweet-scented flowers and groves of bananas and lemons and coconuts, stands a majestic and well-preserved church, the "cathedral" of Rikitea, largest place of worship in eastern Polynesia. Half a century ago the natives of Manga Reva built it, with the stimulus of a zeal as great as that which gave Italy Milan, or Germany Cologne, or England Winchester and Lichfield and York. A thousand men turned their thoughts and their hands to this work; and a church able to seat 2000 persons rose in a single year here on this far-set isle of the South Seas. It is constructed of stone and of coral, and its roof consists of red tiles brought from France.

Within there are notable paintings, one the gift of Rome, portraying the natives of the South Seas seeking the protection of the church. And among the gold and gems here in this great church, beyond the ken of the world, is such a pearl as the eyes of few white men have looked upon. Forty carats is its weight, its value visionary. Whence it came no man can say, except that it was the gift of the last king of Manga Reva.

Within the great cathedral today the handful of people in Rikitea-Polynesians, Chinese, a few half-castes and one or two far-wandering white men-are as lost as the army which is said to have disappeared entirely from the sight of its commander within St. Peter's farreaching walls.

The broad footpath, leading as through a bountiful garden, was once the thoroughfare of Rikitea, lined with many houses, even having its shops not lacking their delicacies and their luxuries from Paris, which found ready market among a people prosperous in their trade of copra and fruit and their rich pearl fisheries among the near-by islands.

4 Today the houses number little over a score, the "shops" are but the hut of the inevitable Chinese trader, with his calico and his cheap trinkets, his flour and sugar and tinned meat. The streets which once diverged among the stone houses of the prosperous of this forgotten city, even as far as the mountain sides, are now but tangled woods trails; and the only habitations they seek are the few native huts hidden in the jungle which is fast reclaiming Manga Reva. Like the Marquesas, with Nukahiva and Atuana, the Austral Islands, with Raevavae and Tubai and Rimitara, and many another isle of the great South Seas, though once greater than all, Manga Reva and Rikitea had a storied past, but they are likely to have no future. For the natives of the South Seas are passing, with everincreasing rapidity as their numbers grow less, and the white man has found in years gone by that the only existence which is possible on these islands cannot be endured for any considerable length of time. Plenty have tried in the South Seas and elsewhere, and but few have found that the fulfillment for them was anything approaching the romise: For with a thousand miles between himself and even an outpost of the world, he comes to feel that what he once knew as "civilization" has disappeared from his vision as completely as if it were upon another planet, and the pleasures and beauties of the place pail as time passes and he finds himself cut off from the rest of the inhabited globe.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Paris

Alexandre Millerand, who is presenting himself for the senatorial election on April 6, has issued an appeal to the electors. He takes an antagonistic attitude toward the present Government and elaborates a definite policy His election, which seems probable, will be a bid for full leadership of the Opposition, especially as Raymond Poincaré has, except on rare occasions, abandoned political strife. M. Millerand declares that a continuance of the present system might lead France to catastrophe.

Before Lord Bradbury-who has been for over five years the chief British delegate on the Reparation Commission-left Paris, the writer was informed that, although as a public servant he resigns, he is being consulted with regard to a number of problems by the ish Government. Particularly is he interested in the question of interallied debts and in the bringing of the pound back to par. Lord Bradbury has had perhaps the most distinguished career of any British Treasury official. Government after Government-Liberal, Coalition, Conservative and Labor-has looked upon him as its chief financial counselor. He was the youngest man ever to become head of the British Treasury, and during the war his name appeared upon all Treasury notes. His task in Paris has been performed excellently. Before he left, the American and the British correspondents here fêted him, and Lord Bradbury made a remarkable speech in which he pleaded for equality of treatment as between European nations, and a spirit of fraternity.

The Hotel Astoria, a magnificent building on the Champs Elysées which has long been the headquarters of the Reparation Commission, was to have been quitted now that the commission has so greatly reduced its staff. For reasons of economy it is desirable to find smaller premises, and it is understood that the proprietors of the hotel are, in view of the expected increase of visitors to Paris, desirous of turning the building into an ordinary commercial establishment again. But unfortunately there is a heavy monetary indemnity attached to the cancella tion of the lease, and unless the hotel proprietors are willing to waive it, there will be no advantage for Reparation Commission to make the change. It is likely however, that an arrangement will soon be reached

A most pleasant institution has just been discovered Every week a group of workmen from the fortifications gather to sing the old songs of France under the leadership of M. Lucien Laurent. This curious choir has been brought together without any thought of financial reward or fame. The workmen were animated purely by the satisfaction of song, and they meet informally and without the smallest pretensions. It was quite fortuitously that attention was called to them, and it was only with difficulty that they were persuaded to make a public appearance. Undoubtedly their singing was worthy of a finely trained choir. One hopes, however, that they will not change their character or consent often to appear in public, but will, as hitherto, simply meet when the day's work is finished to express themselves in song. Thirty American women students recently came to study at the Paris University the system of teaching the French language. They are already familiar with the tongue and with French history and literature, but they are desirous of obtaining in France the title of Professor of French. It would seem that there is an increasing desire abroad to become acquainted with the French language, and would-be teachers are now frequently recelved at the Sorbonne. A preliminary course is first to them, and afterward they work side by side with their French fellow-students, who are also being taught how to teach French in other countries. The American students will further be taken into the French provinces in order that their knowledge of France shall not be confined to the capital and its customs.

It is stated that the campaign for the encouragement of payments by check has succeeded beyond expectations. The French have always been reluctant to make use of the check, and previous attempts to induce them to adopt the method have been comparative failures. But it is hoped, now that the system is coming more widely into vogue, that it will spread rapidly. The French are learning gradually, and should learn more and more quickly, that there is no danger in giving and accepting checks. and it is therefore hoped that within a year the be a real economy of currency effected. If only the habit becomes general, it will not be necessary to keep so many bank notes in circulation. Since the campaign was started a few weeks ago, the Banque de France reports that payments by check have amounted to 300,000,000 francs. It is at any rate a good start. The Government has made a concession to those who pay by check—the receipt stamp on bills which are acquitted in this manner is no longer necessary.

The Touring Club de France is properly protesting against unnecessary street noises. Paris, like other great cities, is shaken by sound, and from morning till night there is one continuous roar. A good deal of it is quite unjustified, and just as the smoke nuisance and other disagreeable features of large cities are being tackled. so is the noise nuisance to be abated. The din of the city streets, it is discovered, is largely due to the exaggerated use made by chauffeurs of their motor horns, and loud vibrations of the automobile engine Prefect of Police has assured the club that orders have een given for rules already laid down to be respected by drivers. Any abuses calculated to increase the clamor the public highways are to be sternly repressed Clearly, there is much to be done in this direction, and careful inquiry would show precisely what strident noises, which together produce an almost intolerable hub-

At the Académie des Sciences a new test of pearls has been tried out, it is said, successfully. There has been a long controversy over the difference between the Japanese culture pearl and the natural pearl. The natural pearl has no core and is formed of successive concentric layers of the deposit of carbonate of lime. culture pearl has a kernel of mother-of-pearl. How to distinguish between them has been a problem. It would be, of course, absurd to cut them in half and thus destroy cess. Now a simple method has, it is stated, been found an intense light similar to that used for the ultramicroscope is supplied. The resultant photograph shows the circular structure of the natural pearl, while the Japanese product shows parallel streaks.

Sanford Bates' Prison Recommendations

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: No thoughtful person listening to the remarks of Sanford Bates, State Commissioner of Correction, at the close of the radio concert given by the orchestra com posed of inmates of Charlestown State Prison recently could fail to be impressed with the practical significance of all that he said."

Those who have had experience with these men, many of whom are doing their best to atone for the past by better thinking and living, can appreciate the value of Mr. Bates' recommendations for the improvement of liv ing and working conditions, for, without any doubt, if these are acted upon, they will go far toward making better citizens of paroled and discharged prisoners.

If there is to be a new prison in Massachusetts, let erected where fresh air and sunskine may be (These are free, they cost the State nothing.) Let it be here land may be cultivated by the prisoners, and vegetables may be not only raised by them, but also provided meals, that they may appreciate the reward of honest labor. Let a small wage be given for work well done, that when those who have served their time go back into the world, they may have more than the very small sum allowed by the State, to tide them over until steady work can be found; or, in the case of the life prisoner. that he may be helped to win back a degree of courage and self-respect by being able to help, even if in only a very small way, some member of his family. Many of these life risoners have a desire to help others, as any one knowing them can testify., and which has been for the past few years, could be maintained under less trying conditions, not only for the prisoners but for the officers who have charge of them. Boston, Mass. A. L. McM.

It is this: Constantly great artists in both vocal and instrumental music are being brought before the public. The people go to hear them and gain much, but they could gain at least 100 per cent more education if they had the program to study for from fourteen days to a month before the performance.

For instance, last year I read in the daily press that De Pachmann was to give an entire Chopin evening, Immediately I telephoned down town and asked for a copy of the program-to find that, while the date was fixed some four weeks in advance, no program had been received. I went to work on my Chopin in a general way, but longed to study the numbers he was to play that I might better enjoy and understand his work. weeks I called again and finally received the program before the concert.

This same thing is happening with every great artist. I feel that a reform along the line I have suggested would represent the strongest musical educational move that has ever been made. Multnomah, Ore.
